Weather Key Points

Regional Operations Center

Western Region

Thursday, September 15

- Fire weather conditions will remain locally elevated across the southern mountains and foothills and the Sierra Thursday and Friday due to breezy winds gusting up to 30 mph
 - A few thunderstorms are also possible across far northern California on Friday, bringing a threat for some lightning
- Winds will increase for many areas of the state Saturday into Sunday as a storm system begins to impact the state. This system looks to bring beneficial rainfall to much of northern California along with even cooler temperatures.
 - Gusty winds ahead of the rainfall may increase fire weather concerns on Saturday, especially over the Sierra
 - While no widespread heavy rain is expected, isolated burn scar impacts could develop near pockets of any more sustained rainfall
 - Some light snow is also possible over the high Sierra late Sunday into early Monday, though no significant accumulation is expected at this time
